As you get older you start to embrace peace and calm. Drama and excitement no longer hold much appeal and you realize how precious your time is.

There is no longer a need to rush anything as you have learned that, whatever is meant for you, will not pass you by.

Beauty is found in the slow breath of appreciation;

knowing that Winter will be followed by Spring and the dark days in between will bring a well earned rest.

You understand that life is fluid and nothing remains the same and you have learned to accept that there will be an equal amount of ups, during your time spent here, as there will be downs. And as you grow weaker in energy you become stronger in mind.

You are now a seasoned survivor. You have acquired deep wisdom, which came at a cost.

Inside, you hold many stories, some which are relayed proudly and others which will never be told.

You carry pieces of everyone you have ever loved and your heart is heavy with affection for each and every person who touched your soul.

Your mood is now buoyant and you're no longer running the race- in fact you're happy to meander contentedly to the finish line.

Your seeds have been sewn and the fruits of your labor are ripe and ready to be shared and consumed.

Best of all you now realize what was important and what wasn't and you can unclutter all that is no longer needed. You see life is actually very simple. What a shame we spend so many years of our lives making it so complicated.
